Considerable discussion arose upon the subject, but as no appeal was taken, the decision of the chair prevailed.

Mr. LANSFORD—a bill to incorporate the town of Warnesburg; passed.

Mr. BROWDER—a bill to allow the county of Logan to change its subscription to the Louisville and Nashville railroad company; referred to the committee on Internal Improvement.

Mr. C. FIELD, Jr.—a bill to amend an act to regulate the wilderness road; passed.

Mr. DANIEL—a bill to amend the charter of the North Middletown, Mt. Ida, and Mt. Sterling turnpike road company; passed.

Mr. REID—a bill for the benefit of A. S. Trimble, late Sheriff of Morgan county; passed.

Mr. EAVES—a bill to prevent the wanton destruction of fish in Green river and its tributaries; referred to the committee on Internal Improvement.

Mr. SKEAN—a bill to change the place of voting in district No. 1, in Estill county; passed.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. WHITE offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, That the committee on Education be requested to examine into the school laws, and see if the time for district trustees of common schools to report their districts to the county commissioner of each county, could not be extended to the 10th day of March in each year, instead of the 10th day of January, as now provided by law, without any hindrance to the cause of common schools, and that they report by bill or otherwise.

Mr. CLEMENT offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That this House hereafter meet at 9 o'clock, A. M., and 7 o'clock, P. M.

Mr. GRAY proposed the following substitute for the resolution just adopted:

Resolved, That hereafter this House will meet at half past nine o'clock, A. M.

The resolution as amended was then adopted.

THE COMMONWEALTH. FRANKFORT.

THOMAS M. GREEN, Editor.

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1858.

The price of the DAILY COMMONWEALTH for the session will be $1.50—and for the Weekly, 75 cents—invariably in advance.

We can supply extra copies of the Daily Commonwealth put up in wrappers ready for mailing, at two cents a piece. Orders left at the office or with our Reporters, in the Senate and House of Representatives, will be promptly attended to.

American State Convention.

The American Executive Committee for the State at large have called a convention of the delegates of the American party of the State to nominate a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

The convention will be held in this city, Wednesday, January 27th inst. The basis of representation will be two delegates for each Representative district; that is, two delegates for each Representative in the lower branch of the State Legislature.

It is hoped that this Convention will be fully attended, and that the watch fires of the American party will be made to glow with renewed brightness throughout the State.

American papers throughout the State are requested to call attention to this Convention.

Attention Americans.

There will be a meeting of the Americans of Franklin county at the Court House, on next Monday, (County Court day), for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the State Convention to be held on the 27th inst. Let every one, who can, attend, as it is of the utmost importance that the sentiment of the people should be made known as to who shall be our candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

The Governor's house will be open for the reception of company from 8 o'clock until 11½ o'clock, on every Monday evening during the session of the General Assembly.

The Ladies of the Methodist Church will hold a Fair, at the Odd Fellows Hall, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings next, the 19th and 20th inst. The proceeds are to be applied to aid in building their new Church. We hope they may receive a liberal patronage.

Senator McBRAYER has introduced a resolution in the Senate, with a view to the purchase, by the State, of valuable public documents which are not to be found in the State Library or any public office of the Government. When the capitol was burned, many years ago, the books and public documents contained in the library were destroyed. The journals of the Senate and House of Representatives, from 1792, up to the time of the burning, including, in all, nearly forty volumes; and the journals of the Constitutional Conventions of 1792 and 1799, were lost, and have never been replaced. Nor is there any hope of finding them unless in the private library of the late Capt. SAM. DAVIS, who went to much trouble and expense to collect every book and document relating to the legislative history of Kentucky.

No one can fail to appreciate the value of these important documents. Our library is incomplete without them, and every effort should be made to procure a complete set. The honor of the State demands that we should have in our State Library every public document connected with its history, and especially the official records of its Legislatures and early Conventions. These old documents are a part of the State's history, and as they are already very scarce, every year that is allowed to pass without making an effort to collect them, and making provision for their safe preservation, increases the chances of their total loss. Other States have incurred great expense to preserve the political and legislative records of their early history. Pennsylvania, New York and other States, have appropriated immense sums for these purposes, and the collections which they have made—specimens of which can be seen in our Library—show how careful they are to preserve the materials with which to write their history.

The journals of our State Legislature, and of the Conventions of 1792 and 1799, embrace a very important and interesting period in the history of our State, and are associated with the names and acts of some of our greatest men. Duty to them—a proper regard for the memory of these men who laid the foundation of our State, and illustrated and sustained its early history—duty to ourselves and our posterity, every consideration of State pride, all demand that we should rescue and preserve among the archives of our State, these important records. They are an important and necessary part of our State history, and should, by all means, be in our State Library. If not now secured by the State, there is every reason to fear that they will become scattered and lost. And hereafter when the future historian of Kentucky searches for the records of its Legislatures, and of the great men who performed so important a part in its history, these documents will be missing. We have yet had no history worthy of the State, its people, its statesmen and heroes—it is yet to be written—and no paper, no document, no record should be lacking, which would in any degree throw light upon any part of it.

There is not in our State Library an official copy of the celebrated resolutions of '98-'99, which occupy so prominent a part in its political history. The journals of the Constitutional Convention of 1792 and 1799, are not there. Surely these records should be preserved, not alone for their intrinsic value, but for the honor of the men who figured so honorably and brilliantly in those movements which formed our great State.

We hope the Legislature will take some steps to complete our Library, and inasmuch as the missing documents are as scarce as they are valuable; ample provision should be made for their preservation.

Geological Survey of Kentucky.

[CONCLUDED.]

In a corresponding geological position in Pennsylvania, a sandstone of very similar character occurs; but the shale between it and their great coal horizon is often as much as seventy-five to one hundred feet, embracing two beds of coal of one to one and a half feet.

Coal No. 3, above the foregoing sandstone, is also only been observed, as yet, satisfactorily in Union county, under the name of the "ice-house coal." The paleontological characters of the roof of this coal are, up to the present time, only very imperfectly ascertained. It is, as we have shown in the previous volume, a coal perhaps better adapted for manufacturing iron than any of the coals in the lower five hundred feet of the measures, more especially as its hard grey shale roof encloses, where it has been opened, good bands of iron ore, of which an analysis is given on pages 57 and 58 of the first Geological Report. The bed of coal in Pennsylvania corresponds to this coal, judging, however, at present, only from order of superposition, appears to be quite a persistent bed of excellent quality, usually about six to eight feet, but thickening to eight feet on Broad Top Mountain.

The paleontology of the roof of coal No. 4 seems to be better defined, at present, by its fossil plants, than any of the coals of the Western Coal Field. They are considered by M. Lesquereux to be identical in species with those found in Pennsylvania, over the coal that underlies the Mahoning sandstone, and in the roof of the Pomeroy coal of Ohio.

Since M. Lesquereux left Kentucky he made a visit to Ohio for the special purpose of investigating the true geological horizon of the Pomeroy coal, and has now fully satisfied himself that it is properly placed below the Mahoning sandstone, and that it is the equivalent of the Giger bed, No. 4, of his report of Western Kentucky. Under the name of M. Lesquereux did not get a view of the coal with two clay partings, in the Curlew Hill, between the Curlew mines and Mulford's mines, on the southwest of section 15, T. 3 R. 1 W. of the Ohio river; but there is little doubt, when its paleontology is investigated, that it will prove to be the same bed; the superposition of this bed in the series, the clay partings, the underlying Curlew limestone, and its position below the Curlew sandstone, the second principal mass of thick sandstone, above the conglomerate, all tending to predict this as its true geological position, and if so, then the Curlew sandstone, all the geological horizon of the well known Mahoning sandstone of Pennsylvania, which marks the base of the "Barren Coal Measures" of that State, where it is, sometimes, a conglomerate or pebbly sandstone.

Above this sandstone, in Pennsylvania, there are upwards of four hundred feet of strata extending up to the bottom of the Pittsburgh coal, in which only thin beds of coal occur that are not workable, and hence are denominated "Barren Coal Measures." In the corresponding space in the Western Coal Measures of Kentucky we find a marked difference. The space of the hundred and forty feet above the top of the Curlew sandstone we have three good coals, varying in thickness from three to five feet each; and one of them is one of the most reliable coals in the Western Coal Field of Kentucky, and the two others are, at least locally, workable, one being three feet and the other four feet. These coals lie in the space from the Main Mulford coal, No. 9, to the top of the Curlew sandstone.

The Western Kentucky Coal Field can, therefore, hardly be said to have any true Lover Barren Coal Measures.

No. 6 is the coal usually known as the "Little Vein" of the Union county series, covered by light bluish, schistose, micaceous argillaceous sandstone, with the intervention of only a few inches of somewhat darker shales, lying immediately on the coal, which latter, however, a few miles to the northwest, are thicker, and contain some curious seed vessels and imperfect shells, still undetermined.

Most of the organic remains hitherto observed in the roof of this coal are much mutilated, and difficult to refer, specifically, to their proper place, hence the paleontological evidence in regard to the geological horizon of this coal is still indefinite, but it probably represents one of the thin coals of the Barren Coal Measures of Pennsylvania, and, according to recent observations, by M. Lesquereux, the Heiger's coal at Athens, Ohio.

Coal No. 7 is but a thin and rather imperfect seam, yet is of importance in a practical point of view, on account of the black band horizon which it marks. Interstratified in its shale roof is a dark heavy calcareous ferruginous bituminous rock, affording, locally, black band ore. This geological level is marked, paleontologically, by the remains of fishes, some of which are very singular in their structure; but their specific character still remains undetermined. There are also marine shells in some of their layers, but those collected as yet are mostly fragmentary, amongst them a Bellerophon, perhaps referable to B. Manfordensis.

Nothing has, as yet, been obtained from the roof of the water or well coal No. 8.

The hard black slaty shale over No. 9, or the main Mulford coal, is often vastly rich in shells, particularly a species of Avicula, which was at first referred to A. papiracea, but which is undoubtedly a distinct species, from the straight edges of its sides and other characters, described in Mr. Ed. Cox's paleontological observations. It has been figured by Mr. Chappelear, and is described by Mr. Ed. Cox under the name of A. reticulata. As yet these shales have only yielded to the paleontologist small Calamities, mentioned in M. Lesquereux' report. The remains of fishes are also frequent in the shales over this coal, but no marked difference has yet been observed between them and those found in a higher coal, No. 11.

It was supposed at first that No. 9 coal would prove to be the equivalent of the main Pittsburgh coal, but the paleontological investigations of this have not confirmed this supposition, but rather tend to prove that it is a coal still higher in the series than the main Mulford, according to recent observations in Pennsylvania, by M. Lesquereux.

No. 10 coal that intervenes between this coal and No. 11, referred to in the former report, as the "middle coal," is not every where present in the Western coal field. It usually lies about forty to fifty feet under No. 11, and sixty to seventy feet above No. 9.

All these coals which have been enumerated, from No. 1 to No. 12, lie in the space between the Curlew sandstone and the conglomerate.

Where the Coal Measures are well developed—as near the valley of the Ohio river, in Union county—the space, including the above coals, from No. 1 to 12, between the top of the conglomerate and the Anvil sandstone, is about nine hundred feet. We must be prepared, however, to find this space, locally, very much reduced in thickness, especially some portions of the margin of the basin. For instance, the paleontological evidence rather goes to show, at present, that the coal with clay parting, sixty feet below the top of the hill below Havesville, is the equivalent of No. 11 coal of the preceding series, and if so, the corresponding Coal Measures are reduced here, on the eastern margin of the western coal basin, to two hundred and sixty or two hundred and seventy feet, and reports which I have seen of the coal in the townships of Wethersfield, Austin, and Canfield, in Summit and Stark counties, in Ohio, I am disposed to believe that there the same Coal Measures will be found to be contracted to nearly the same dimensions; and in some of the rich Coal Measures of Hopkins county, the thick coal will be so close together that I believe the same space will not be found to exceed more than three hundred or four hundred feet.

So far as the investigations in the Western Coal Measures have been carried, it appears that the most reliable and persistent beds of coal, lying between the conglomerate, are Nos. 1, 9 and 11.

Wherever the strata at the base of the Coal Measures are exposed in good natural sections the survey is able to detect and recognize the Coal No. 1, from the Ohio river, near the mouth of Tradewater, extending back, south, with an easterly tendency curvature, through Union, Hopkins, the northern confines of Christian, through Muhlenburg, into Butler. It is also recognized in Hancock in several places, generally preserving a thickness of from three to five feet. It also lies deep-seated in Henderson county, perhaps reaching a thickness of six feet or more.

No. 9 has been traced through Henderson, the greater part of Union, Hopkins, into Butler, preserving a thickness of from three to five feet. Over the same ground, No. 11 usually accompanies No. 9, attaining a thickness, in Hopkins and Muhlenburg counties, of six to seven and a half feet, lying usually from eighty to one hundred feet above it.

Nos. 12, 6, 5, 4, and 3 come next in the order of persistence and reliability.

No. 12 has been observed best developed in Hopkins and Muhlenburg counties, ranging usually from two to four feet, the upper part being, however, often a "rash coal," as already remarked.

No. 6 has been recognized, as yet, only in Union and Ohio counties. Nos. 5, 4, and 3, only in Union county, and No. 3, only in the prosecution of the survey they will be discovered elsewhere.

The general boundary of the Eastern Kentucky coal field is described in the first chapter of the third volume, on pages 27, 28, and 29.

Speaking of the lower beds of coal, of this field, we find the following interesting remarks: "The lowest coal, lying between the base of the conglomerate and the sub-carboniferous limestone, will probably be found of workable thickness along the greater part of its range through Rowan, Bath, Estill, and Madison counties. Its place can generally easily be discovered by the coal dirt, streaks of fire clay, or springs of water, that appear some fifteen or twenty feet above the top surface of the sub-carboniferous limestone. Throughout the same extent of country, there will usually be found a valuable bed of iron ore of the limonite and carbonate varieties, reposing immediately above the upper surface of the sub-carboniferous limestone, conforming with its elevations and depressions; in this respect, differing entirely in its position from the deposits of hematite and hydrated oxides, which have been described in the First Report, occurring associated with the sub-carboniferous limestone, in the western counties, near the Cumberland river.

The Coal Measures, in Morgan county, have been further explored, since the appearance of the first volume, especially on the Elk, Caney, and main fork of the Licking, as high as West Liberty. The most interesting features in the geology of this part of the country are the numerous outcrops of Cannel coal. The main bed lies towards the base of the hills, and sometimes, immediately in the channel of the stream, and is composed almost entirely of this variety of coal, which varies from thirty to fifty inches in thickness. There is another bed, the upper fourteen inches of which is also cancell coal. This bed lies, usually, high in the hills, some three hundred feet above the main cancell bed. It is probable that the high bed of coal may prove to be the equivalent of No. 11 coal of the Western Coal field.

The fourth chapter of both the second and third volumes comprise details, so far as collected, on the Stratigraphical Geology of the different counties not previously reported on in the first volume.

Ample and full details of all the soils, minerals, ores, rocks, &c., so far as analyzed, will be found in the able, laborious, and voluminous Report of Dr. ROBERT PETER, the Chemical Assistant to the Survey, and general remarks on the same subject, will be found, not only in the chapter on Agriculture, already designated, but in Dr. D. D. OWEN'S Report, in chapters three and four, of both the second and third volumes.

The details of the Topographical work are comprised in the Report of Mr. S. S. LYON, the Topographical Assistant to the Survey, illustrated by numerous sections and diagrams of the stratification of the coal measures in Hopkins and Greenup counties. That Report supplies a great amount of useful local information to the inhabitants of these counties, and exhibits their wonderful productiveness in coal and iron ores. Hopkins county has proved to be one of the richest counties in the State in the extent, great thickness and qualities of its coal, while almost every hill in Greenup affords more or less iron ore, alternating in coal measures.

Two beautiful copper-plate maps, one of Hopkins, and embracing portions of Muhlenburg and Christian counties; the other of Greenup, and a portion of Carter, will accompany the third volume, besides ten plates of organic remains, being the commencement of the description of the numerous fossils which are so characteristic of the rocks of Kentucky.

The maps are on a scale of 1-100,000, laid off into sections and townships, and the hill work represented by lines of equal altitude. The lines of the survey have been run, not only with reference to the geological formation of the county, but also to their main topographical features, forming most elegant sectional maps of the counties, very clear and distinct, and on a scale on which all points of importance can be laid down, since they are nearly four times the size of the counties as represented on Milne and Bruden's map of 1852, and equally as correct as the Government sectioned map of the older States of the Union.

The following extract from the concluding remarks of Dr. Owen's Report, shows the present condition of the Survey; what has been done, and what still remains to be accomplished:

Every county in the State has now received a general geological examination. The detailed survey has been extended over Union, Hopkins, Greenup, and part of Hancock, a small portion of Crittenden, Christian, Carter, and Lawrence. The base line will be in January, we extended by the close of this season's field work, about eight to one hundred miles from the mouth of Highland creek, in a due east course through the State.

If we were in possession of a correct geographical map of the entire State, the geological data now collected would enable me to lay down, with approximate general accuracy, the boundaries of the different formations, but not all the meanders of the same, except in the counties which have received a special geologic-topographical survey.

To complete the outline of the western coal field it is now only necessary to connect the surveys on the confines of Hopkins and Muhlenburg with those made this season in Hancock, through Muhlenburg, Ohio, parts of Butler, Edmonson, Grayson, and Breckinridge counties. This might be accomplished in the course of two years more, with sufficient force.

To complete the outline of the eastern coal field, from the surveys on the edge of Greenup and Carter, to the Tennessee line, through Carter, Morgan, the edge of Bath, Montgomery, Estill, Owsley, Madison, Rockcastle, Laurel, Paducah, Wayne, and Clinton, would require a long period, because the distance and area is greater, and the country much more difficult to survey, and more mountainous.

In the further prosecution of the Geological survey, there is no doubt that the first and most important work to be done, is the further extension of the lines defining, topographically, the precise boundaries of the different geological formations, and the beds of coal and iron ore lying adjacent to those lines. Next in order, should come the filling up of the topographical work still lacking in the interior of the coal fields. This would comprise, in the western coal field, the whole of the counties of Henderson and Daviess, and the portions of Ohio, Muhlenburg, and Grayson, lying within the marginal survey, in the eastern coal field, Breathitt, Floyd, Pike, Letcher, Perry, Harlan, Clay, Knox, Whitley, and the parts of Carter, Morgan, Owsley, Laurel, and Pulaski, which might lie within the marginal survey. After that would come the survey along the boundary lines between the formations belonging to the sub-carboniferous, Devonian, Upper, Lower Silurian, extending through the counties of Lewis, Fleming, Bath, Montgomery, counties of Lewis, Fleming, Bath, Montgomery, Estill, Madison, Garrard, Lincoln, Casey, Russell, Cumberland, Taylor, Marion, Letcher, Nelson, Bullitt, and Jefferson. These are the counties which require especially to be topographically surveyed, in order to be able to construct a reliable geological map of Kentucky, one of the great ulterior objects of the survey.

The base line is now carried entirely across the western coal field, affording now, not only a basis of departure for all surveys to start from, in Henderson and Daviess counties, but the means, also, of closing and connecting any surveys already commenced, or which may be undertaken in the western coal field.

A short time will suffice to carry that line into the eastern coal field, where it can be taken up by the eastern counties and carried across that field, for the attainment of the same objects in that district of the State.

In the two hundred and two soils, sub-soils and under clays collected from different geological formations, which have already undergone a chemical analysis, and are reported in this and the two preceding volumes, Kentucky has already undoubtedly done more towards obtaining a just knowledge of her agricultural resources, than any State in the Union. There remains, however, much to be done, even in this department of the survey, as there are between forty and fifty counties from which either the analyses cannot be completed in time for this report, or from which soils have yet to be collected and placed in the hands of the chemist. Further, in many of the counties from which soils have been collected, and the chemical analyses reported, there are often several other varieties of soils that should be analysed, in order to give a complete insight into the agricultural character of the county.

Besides the soils now on hand, ready for the labor of the chemist, there are from sixty to one hundred specimens of ores, coals, limestones, marls, &c., that still remain in the chemical department of the survey at Lexington, besides probably as many more recently collected, and not placed in the chemist's hands.

In the paleontological department of the survey, including the very important investigations connected with the identification of coals by the organic remains in their shaly roofs, only a commencement has yet been made. My own time has been so fully occupied in field and general office work that I have been able, as yet, to devote but very little time to the specific determinations of the many new species of organic remains which have been collected. Before they can be labeled, classified, and placed in the State cabinet, these specimens must receive a thorough paleontological investigation. Ten plates of important and interesting genera and species will appear, and be described in this volume of these, the fossil plants have been studied and described by M. Lesquereux; the crinoids by Sidney S. Lyon, and the Coal Measures mollusca by Edward T. Fox. The two latter gentlemen I have aided occasionally with counsel and opinion, where doubt and difficulties have arisen, but otherwise my duties have not permitted me to share in their descriptions.

The correspondence of the Geological Survey of Kentucky, which I have had personally to attend to, has already become a business which encroaches largely on my other duties.

To render the Geological Survey of Kentucky a complete and generally useful work, all that has been above enumerated must be done. It will then be in a condition, when the country becomes older, richer, and the forest is cleared away, to be connected with an extended trigonometrical survey, which all the States of the Union will undoubtedly ultimately receive, upon a plan somewhat similar to the ordinance survey of England, a work, which, in the present condition of the country, is impracticable, without an outlay beyond the means of its present population.

Those who will give these volumes a careful and attentive perusal must be impressed with the vast amount of labor in the field, office and laboratory, which must have been necessary to accomplish so great a work, and cannot fail to consider these Reports as amongst the most practically useful documents to the Commonwealth of Kentucky, that have ever appeared; and bespeak, not only the skill, energy, untiring industry, and systematic arrangements, which have been brought to bear on each Department of the Survey, but also the enlightened manner in which it has been conducted, and the members of the Geological corps of Kentucky deserve, truly, at the hands of Kentuckians, their most grateful acknowledgments.

WEEKLY UNION HERALD.—We have received the first number of this paper, published at Uniontown, Ky., under the editorial management of James M. Keys. It is neutral in politics, and although it may not take sides in the discussion of the exciting politics of the day, if we may judge from the taste and ability displayed in this number, it will be a valuable and readable family and general newspaper.

There is a Sag Nicht editor in Mississippi, very dirty in his personal habits who never holds a political opinion for twenty-four hours. He shifts only once a fortnight, but shifts every day.

The "N. Y. Times" thinks Governor Wise has presented the only true practical solution of the Kansas question:

"Let the Lecompton Constitution be rejected, and then leave the whole matter in the hands of the Kansas Legislature. Let that body take such measures as it may deem proper to form a new Constitution and make an application for admission as a State. This will be in strict accordance with the principle of popular sovereignty, and must be satisfactory to men of all parties and all sections."
